

Count Seeks New Label For Liz; Asks Help

By Count Marco

Liz Taylor and Richard Burton finally did it. As usual, when Liz does something the whole world wants to know all about it.

Liz has something indeed. I have been trying to create a new word for her, such as "It" was used for Clara Bow, "the Sphinx" for Greta. What can we call Liz Taylor?

One admirer said of Elizabeth and her newest acquisition, "One thing you have to say about Liz, at least she makes it legal." For that, I, Count Marco, give her a great big E for effort. Men may come and go in her life, but at least they're all legal (eventually).

Another fan said, "It's always the hypocrites who complain about her. They're the so-called proper ones on the surface, but peek under the tablecloth and you will discover they're playing footsie with somebody else's husband."

Now, it is not for me to say how long this new marriage will last. After all, whether it's Liz or simple old you, when someone tries it five times it is unlikely that the marriage will last.

In order to get a new word for what Liz stands for, let's analyze her.

She has, as I've said before, total femininity. At times she may get a bit overweight at times she may be seen wearing slacks and shorts. But when she does turn on all the flames, a glow burns so bright and so hot that the whole globe is singed.

Probably, too, one of the reasons she has left such beautiful memories behind is that unlike so many of you whining, begging cast-offs, Elizabeth is self-supporting and, in fact, has made at least one of her ex-husbands rich.

Don't judge her morals trying to choose a new nickname for her.

After all, your homes for unwed mothers are filled with what you call "poor little things," but let a magnificent beauty like Liz follow a man she has decided to marry and you gasp in horror.

Make no mistake about it. Miss Taylor, now Mrs. Burton, is all-woman—which is the reason she makes headlines. There are so few real women around any more that when one crops up she is indeed big news. So I'm sure that between us we can think up a catchy description for her. What is yours?

(Suggestions received at The Herald will be forwarded to Count Marco.)

Girls Will Have Special Assemblies

Girls at Carson High School will attend especially-planned assemblies during the remainder of the spring semester.

Miss Janet Hallahan, representing the Beverly Kelly Charm School, will speak at the Girls' League at Carson High on poise, fashion, and charm at an assembly March 31.

Cotton Day, to be held May 1, will be the occasion of another all-girls assembly. Girls will model dresses which they are now making for the Cotton Day Dance.

At the dance, girls must wear dresses which they have made. Their escorts wear matching shirts, also made by the girls.

How To Let Your Money Trickle Through Your Fingers ...

Each time that you run your fingers over the keys of your Hammond Organ and hear your own music growing surer and sweeter... and feel yourself ready to make a truce with your work and your world... you'll know that you couldn't have spent that money for anything better. Whether you play or just play WITH it isn't important. At the Hammond Organ you're simply making MUSIC. That's why how well you play doesn't matter a bit. What does matter is that you, with your own two hands, are creating music. It is this pleasant performance (and the pleasant sounds that go with it) that quickly drives off the tensions of the day... any day... every day. You need little money and even less talent to get started. We have a six-lesson course that will have you playing in no time. The fee is only $25.00 and includes the use of an organ in your home for a month. It's easy to arrange... just pick up the phone.
